STRATEGY NINE

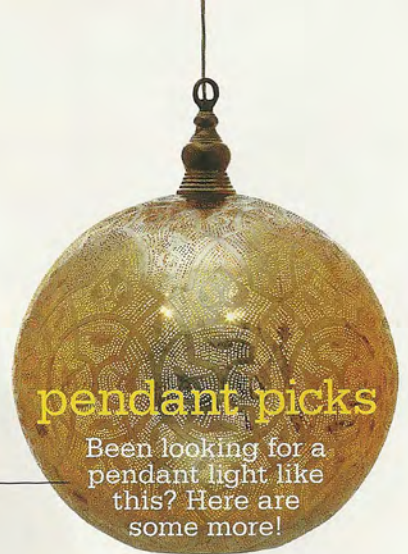

choose the right accent

Accent walls add interest to rooms that lack a focal point. Sarah turned the main wall in the open space into a massive feature wall by covering it with a textural grasscloth wallpaper. "A feature wall holds the focus of a room," she says. A pair of graphic geometric shelves define the dining room; in the living room (page 96), artwork does the same.

STRATEGY TEN

go full circle

"Repetition is one of the best ways to unify a space," says Sarah. But don't just repeat colours and patterns - repeat shapes, too. The mirrors and ball lamp in the living room and the table and pendant light in the dining room are all round items. "Many of the big pieces in the room were square, so it was necessary to soften the space with round elements," she says.
